

Hannah and Allen Levy

Valued Members of our Philanthropic Family

Hannah and Allen Levy may have returned to Denver only a few years ago but their commitment to the community runs deep. Hannah, a New York native, met Allen, a Denver native, in the mid-1980s; she was an ARCO executive and he owned Allen Levy Builders, Inc. The couple has lived in both Los Angeles and Anchorage, but they always considered Denver home, and now live full-time in the Metro area.

When their estate attorney suggested The Denver Foundation as a charitable planning resource, they acted quickly. “We had always planned to leave our estate to charity,” explains Hannah. “Over the years our wills reflected our intentions. We recently designated The Denver Foundation as our formal partner in achieving the goals for our estate.”

Passionate about supporting human service organizations, the couple has a special interest in hunger and homelessness—particularly as they affect children. Among their many volunteer activities, Allen serves on a committee that is building a kitchen for Food Bank of the Rockies and its Kids’ Café.

Hannah works with Metro Volunteers on a

Boomer Volunteer Engagement program.

The Levys are now building a home in Denver, enjoying the outdoors, and loving their new puppy—Zoe, their seventh Weimaraner. We welcome Hannah and Allan Levy and are grateful for the opportunity to steward their estate in future years.
